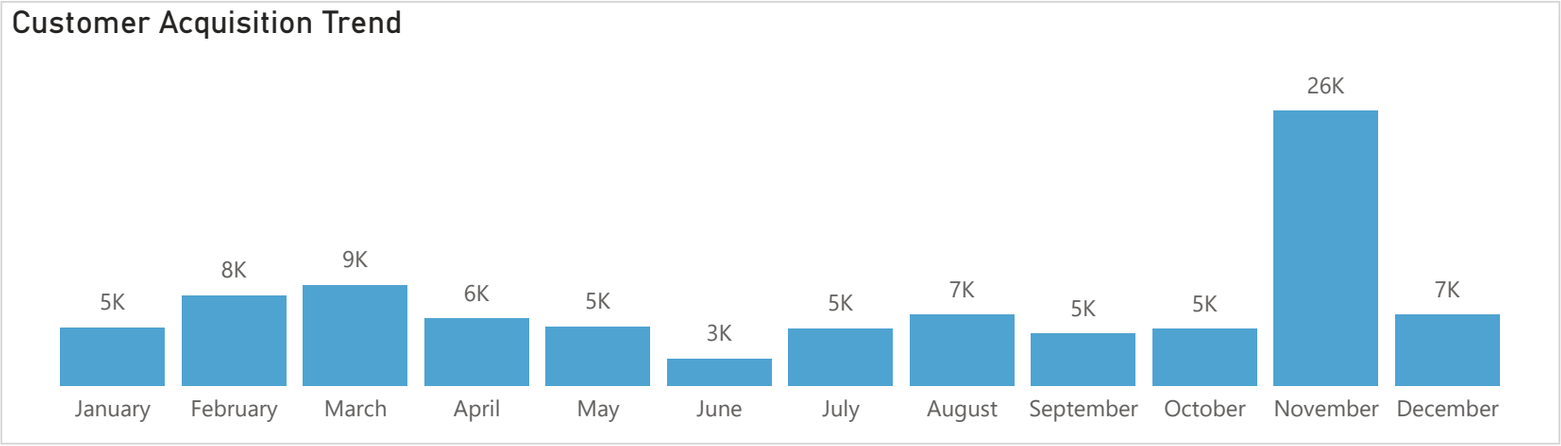
Insights:

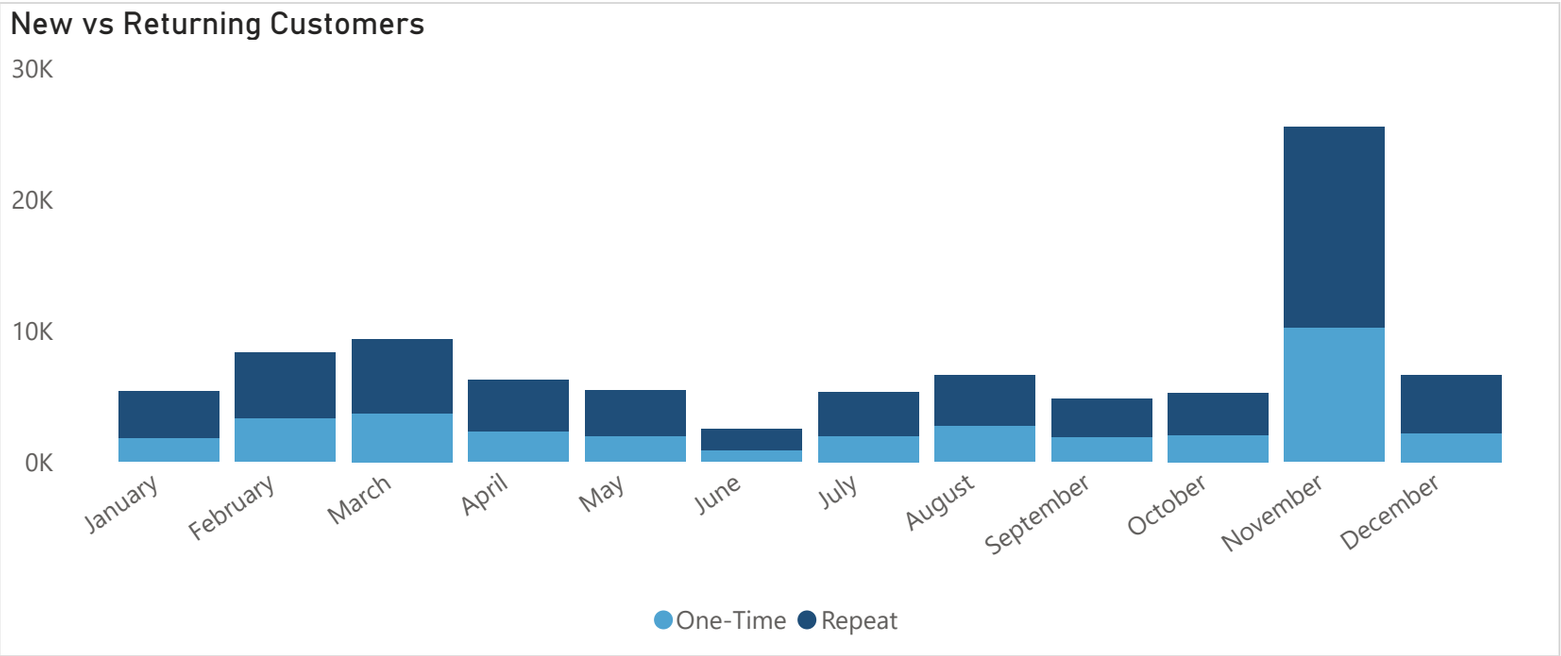
- Revenue peaks in November → seasonal dependency
- Approximately 70% of total revenue is generated by top-performing products, showing high concentration
- Customer retention declines significantly after first purchase, with a sharp drop in repeat customers (~40% retention after Month 1 if applicable)
- Majority of customers are one-time buyers, indicating potential churn risk
- High-value customers drive revenue

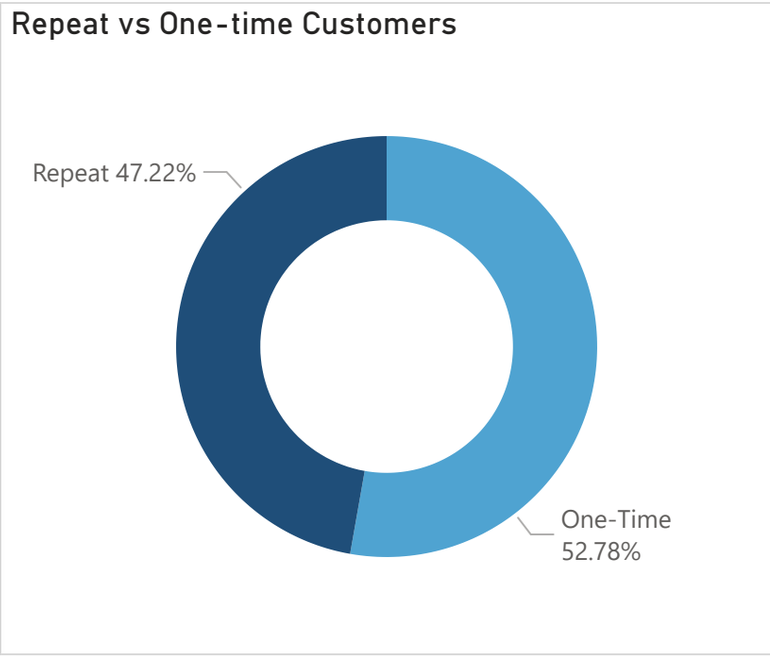
Customer Behavior Analysis



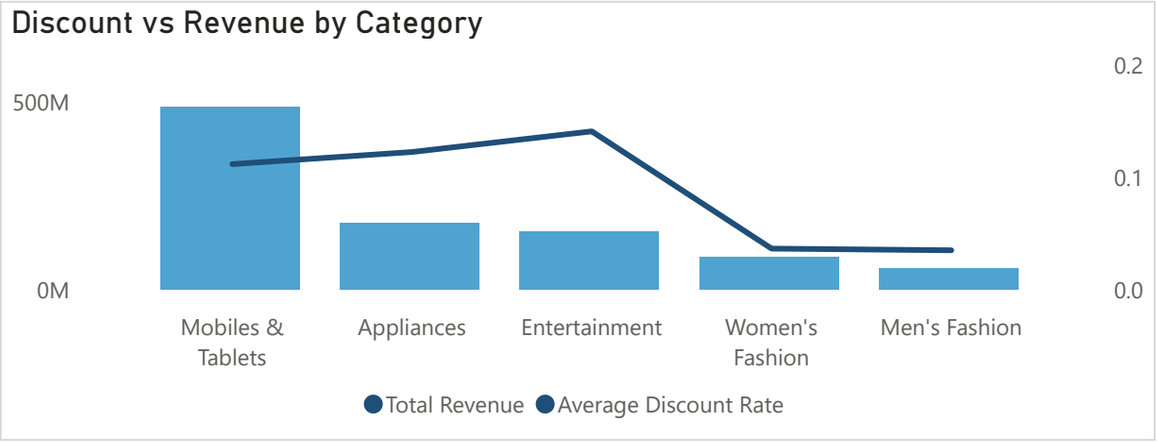
Insights:

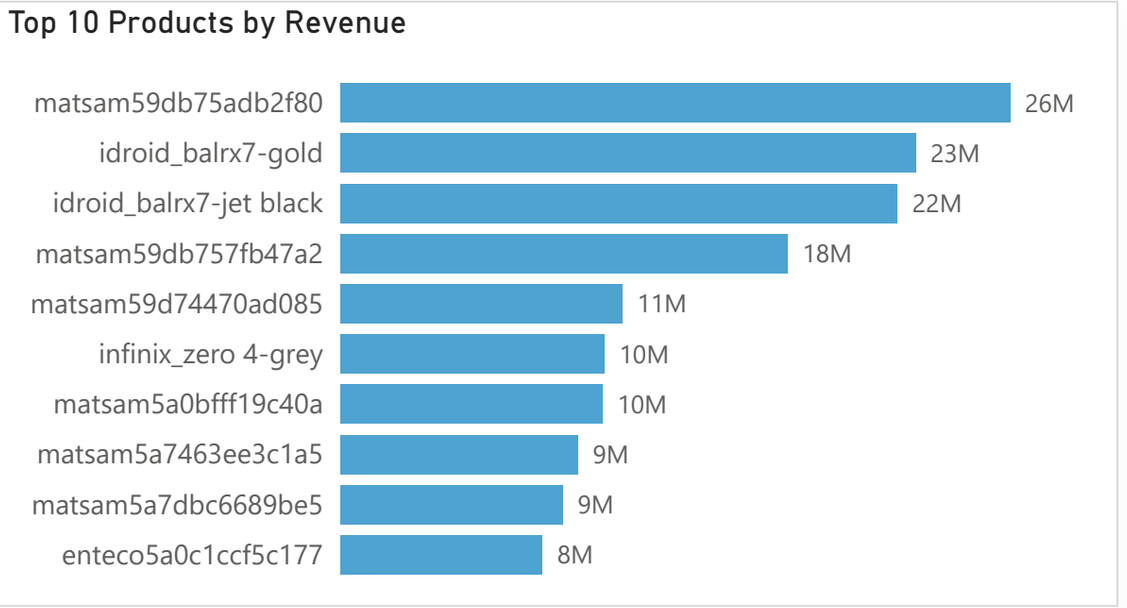
- High proportion of one-time customers indicates strong acquisition but weak retention
- Customer acquisition trend is steady, but repeat purchase rate remains low
- Indicates need for retention-focused strategies to improve customer lifetime value

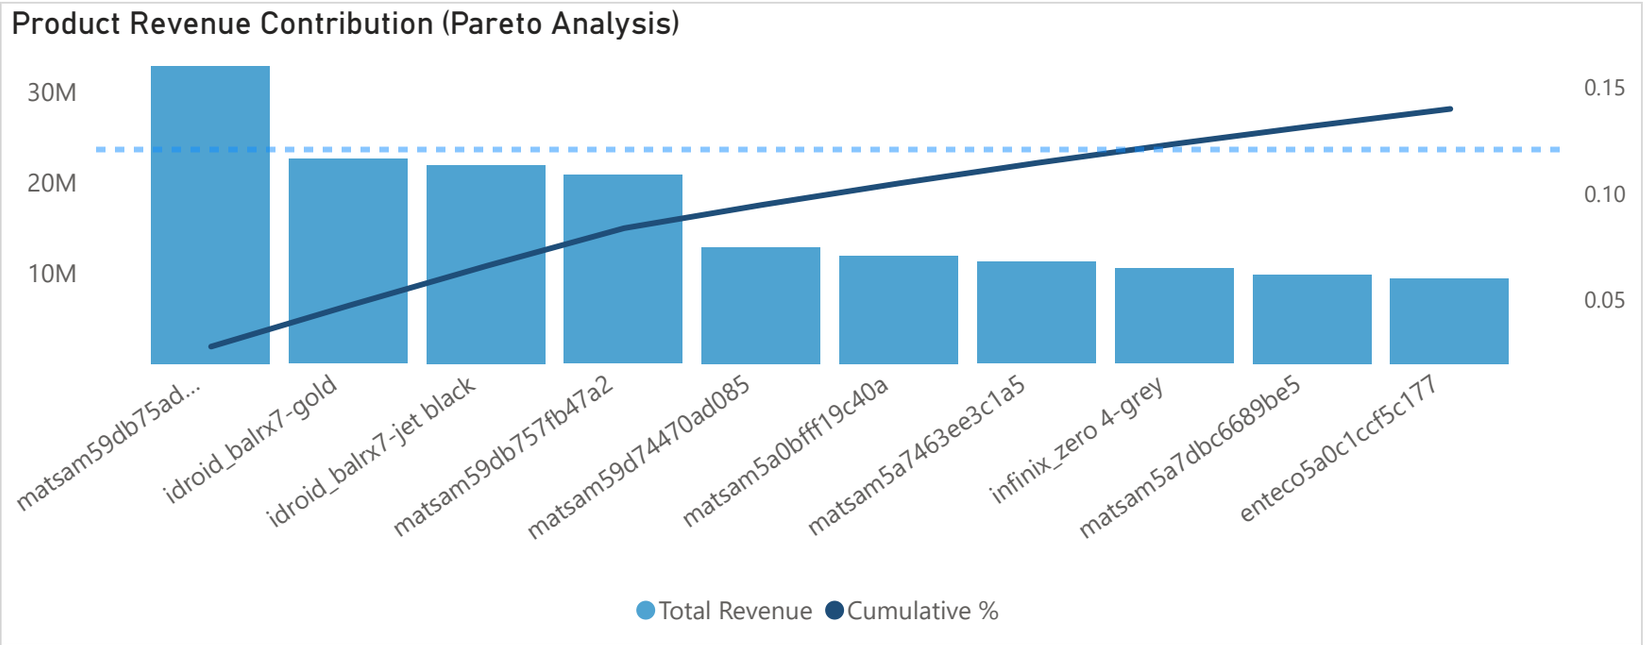




Product Performance Analysis







🧠 Insights:

- A small number of products contribute majority of total revenue (Pareto effect)
- Revenue is highly concentrated in top-performing categories
- Indicates dependency on key products, increasing business risk
